THE FLOW

WHAT YOU GET

- The decision and the record it changed are in the same place.
- New joiners read the history instead of asking for it.
- Internal talk stays internal — Varta is the outside line, this is not.

BUILT IN

- Threads anchor to records, which is what makes the history worth keeping.
- Per-person read state, so a shared channel does not lie about what you have seen.
- Attachments live in object storage with the thread holding the reference.

The inward half – the firm talking to itself, against the record.
